

Thomas Aimoku McClellan
Chief Executive Officer

Aimoku McClellan is CEO of Pelatron, Inc. Under Mr. McClellan's leadership, Pelatron was awarded the #1 ranking of the Fastest 50 Hawai'i business award in 2011 by Pacific Business News for having doubled its revenues every year. Pelatron's expanded capabilities have resulted in exponentially increased revenues and employees.

In 2004, Mr. McClellan co-founded the Pelatron Center for Economic Development a not-for-profit organization. As a member of the PCED Board of Directors, Mr. McClellan helps guide PCED in its mission to advance and promote the economic welfare of Native Hawaiians. PCED owns controlling interest in Pelatron, whose profits partly fund PCED operations and its business programs. These include training, mentoring, and innovative support services through partnerships with the public and private educational sectors, and community and business organizations.

Prior to establishing Pelatron in Hawai'i in 2005, Mr. McClellan successfully started up and directed a number of companies in telecommunications design, engineering, construction management, government program management and administration, as well as founding a food manufacturing company that was sold in 1997.
